Tim and Jamey, can you help on this one? I think you're the right people for quick help on this one, but let me know if that's not the case. We're trying to get a response back to the IG today now that we announced the long term plan.

Smith and Ali want to DP See the discussion below.
 Can you help with a few lines on how to word that correctly?

Script for Discussing the Census Bureau's Role in Redistricting

History

The Census Bureau created the Redistricting Data Program in response to a law Congress passed in 1975, Public Law [P.L.] 94-171. Congress passed this law because states needed detailed data to comply with new requirements surrounding redistricting, such as the "one person, one vote" requirement. While this law was codified in Title 13, within the Bureau we refer to redistricting data as "the PL data."

Over the decades the Census Bureau has adapted the program to be more responsive to state needs. In addition to the collection of voting districts, we have added the Block Boundary Suggestion Project that allows states to identify needed block boundaries. We also expanded states' ability to provide additional geographic boundaries needed for successful redistricting. Finally, we now include ancillary information for those states that have chosen to "reallocate" group quarters populations, such as military, prisoners, and college students prior to redistricting.

Basics of the Census Bureau's Redistricting Program

Under this law the Census Bureau is required to deliver redistricting data to the Governor of each State, as well as those entities in each state that are responsible for redistricting. Those entities have been include legislative leadership from both parties in all legislative chambers, and other public bodies such as redistricting commissions.

The Census Bureau works with states throughout the decade to allow them to identify the small area geographic tabulations they need to conduct legislative redistricting. These geographies include voting districts (precincts, wards, etc.), census blocks, and other electoral geography (congressional and state legislative districts).

Census Bureau Request

The Census Bureau has asked Congress to change the requirement that we deliver the PL data no later than one year from Census Day, i.e., by April 1, 2021. We have asked that Congress extend this deadline for 120 days until July 31, 2021.

Non-Partisan Nature of Program

It is important to understand that the Census Bureau is statutorily obligated to conduct the redistricting program in a non-partisan manner. The program is staffed by career employees and organizationally reports to senior career leadership. At the start of each decade's program, the Redistricting & Voting Rights Data Office contacts the governor and the legislative leadership in each state, including both parties and chambers. We request each state to designate an official liaison or liaisons who can participate in the program and represent the state in a non-partisan manner. This person or people become the official redistricting liaisons and the Census Bureau works with them throughout the lifecycle of the program.

Delivery Schedule in Prior Censuses (and Planned for 2020)

For the last several censuses, the Census Bureau has delivered data to states in "tiers" over a several week period. The 2010 redistricting data was delivered to states over the course of 8 weeks and we had planned to deliver the 2020 redistricting data over a 6 week period from mid-February to late-March in 2021. We need to have a staggered delivery to allow for needed quality review to meet Census Bureau data quality standards. The states to be released each week are grouped in tiers based on several factors, including the redistricting deadlines for individual states, Census Bureau production capacity, and the Census Bureau delivery capabilities. Historically we have included states with off-year elections in the first tier for early delivery.

Effect of Delay on Delivery for the 2020 Census

The Census Bureau recognizes that this delay may cause issues for states. Each state is unique in the timing, mechanics, and statutory basis for their redistricting activities. Some states redistrict through commissions, some through their legislative bodies, some provisions are in state statutes, others in constitutions. This means each state will have to evaluate its specific statutory and constitutional requirements to adapt to this delay.

We announced this necessary schedule change as early as possible to provide states the maximum possible time to adapt their local processes. The Census Bureau will continue to look for actions it can take to reduce the impact of this change on the states.

Draft 4-17-2020 v5

High Level Talking Points Post-Processing Activities and Timelines

What is post processing and why is it important?

Post processing refers to the Census Bureau's processes to summarize the individual and household data that we collect into usable, high quality tabulated data products. Our post processing systems and processes are standardized, tested, and subject to thorough quality assurance procedures so that we can stand behind the data that we produce.

What activities are part of post processing?

There are a number of steps in post processing. At a very high level, post processing starts by merging and standardizing the format of the data we receive from different sources: self-response data from Internet, telephone, and paper questionnaires; response data from our specialized operations (like Group Quarters Enumeration, Service Based Enumeration, etc.), and nonresponse followup responses collected by census field staff. We conduct automated and clerical coding of write-in responses. In a small number of housing units we may receive multiple responses. When that happens we determine the response of record. We conduct geographic processing activities, such as geocoding which assigns an address to a block. We perform statistical techniques to account for missing housing unit status and occupancy information and we receive counts for the Federally Affiliated Overseas population. We then calculate the apportionment counts, and conduct the statutory apportionment calculation to determine the number of seats each State is entitled to in the U.S. House of Representatives.

After production of the apportionment counts (the resident population plus the overseas counts for each state), we conduct additional processing of the characteristic data about respondents. We perform statistical techniques to account for missing or conflicting characteristic data. We conduct modern disclosure avoidance techniques on the response file to honor our statutory requirement to protect each individual's confidential information. Then we tabulate the redistricting data and release it to states.

At every step listed above, we conduct and document rigorous testing and quality assurance of our work. This includes evaluating census responses and post processing data files at multiple levels of geography compared to multiple sets of benchmark data to ensure the demographic reasonableness of the data and verify that post processing procedures are properly applied.

Why does post processing take so long?

As is evident from the description above, post processing activities must, by their nature, occur in a consecutive sequence, and quality assurance needs to be performed at each step of the process. Subject matter expert review is critical to ensuring the quality of the data during this iterative process. It is important to note post processing cannot begin in earnest until all in-field work is completed. We have examined our schedule and compressed it as much as we can without risking significant impacts on data quality. Given the important uses of census data collection processing, it is vital that we not short cut these efforts or quality assurance steps.

What schedule changes are you making?

The Census Act requires the Census Bureau to produce apportionment counts by 12/31/20 and redistricting data by 3/31/21. Our plan was to release the apportionment counts the week before Christmas, and to release the redistricting data over a six-week period from mid-February to late March, 2021.

Under the revised schedule, we will produce the apportionment counts by 4/30/2021 and the redistricting data by 7/31/2021.

What are the implications to post processing of the COVID-19 schedule delays?

DP

We announced this necessary schedule change as early as possible to provide states the maximum possible time to adapt their local processes. The Census Bureau will continue to look for actions it can take to reduce the impact of this change on the states.

Congress of the United States
Washington, DC 20515

March 12, 2020

The Honorable Wilbur L. Ross, Jr.
Secretary
U.S. Department of Commerce
1401 Constitution Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20230

Dear Secretary Ross:

We write to express our concern about the potential impact that the coronavirus, COVID-19, may have on the 2020 Census. With the census in full swing, we request a detailed account of the plans and actions being taken to prevent any disruption to 2020 Census operations and to ensure a fair and accurate count. We are particularly concerned about the impact on hard-to-count communities, which the Census Bureau has acknowledged are more likely to respond to in-person census enumerators, rather than to census forms completed by mail or online.¹

We request that the Department provide a briefing to our staffs with detailed information on contingency plans, steps taken, policies to be implemented, and coordination efforts to mitigate the potential impact of this outbreak on the 2020 Census. Please also provide written responses to the following questions by March 19, 2020:

1. What contingency plans does the Census Bureau have in place for potential epidemics during the 2020 Census?
2. How does the Census Bureau anticipate COVID-19 may impact the 2020 Census, including in the following areas:
 - a. Recruiting, hiring, onboarding, and retention of census workers;
 - b. Self-response;
 - c. Non-response follow-up; and
 - d. Group quarters enumeration?
3. What steps is the Census Bureau taking or planning to take to mitigate the impact in these same areas? What role does the Department expect the previously announced Census fusion center to play?
4. How has the Census Bureau coordinated with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Department of Health and Human Services, the White House Coronavirus Task Force, and state and local health departments to develop protocols in response to the potential threat of COVID-19?

5. Does the Census Bureau plan to utilize its appropriated contingency funding to address the potential impact of COVID-19 on the 2020 Census?² If there are no plans to do so at this time, how will the Bureau evaluate the necessity of using these funds?
6. How does the Census Bureau plan to promote high self-response rates for households, including those who may eventually be under quarantine or isolation? Will the Bureau be issuing any public guidance or amending its advertising and outreach campaign?
7. What information has the Census Bureau communicated to staff, including 2020 Census Takers, regarding actions and policy changes in response to COVID-19, including with respect to non-response follow-up operations?
8. What steps is the Census Bureau taking to protect the health of census workers?
9. Is the Census Bureau considering extending the time period for self-response, non-response follow-up, or group quarters enumeration? If not, will the Bureau revisit that decision depending on conditions in the coming weeks?
10. Is the Census Bureau communicating with colleges and universities that have cancelled classes or asked students to leave campus in order to clarify where to count those students on April 1, 2020?

We look forward to your responses to these requests and to working together to ensure a successful 2020 Census. If you have any questions, please contact Appropriations Committee staff at (202) 225-3351 or Oversight Committee staff at (202) 225-5051.

The Honorable Secretary Wilber Ross
US Department of Commerce
1401 Constitution Ave NW
Washington, DC 20230

Dear Secretary Ross,

We write you today to impress upon you the necessity of extending the enumeration period for the 2020 Census due to the social disruption caused by COVID-19. The Census Bureau currently plans to begin enumeration on April 1st followed by a series of follow-ups to be concluded by the end of July. On March 11th, the World Health Organization declared the COVID-19 a global pandemic and civil society has responded accordingly with institutions across the country beginning to close down non-essential operations in order to slow the spread of the virus.¹ As states and local jurisdictions continue to dedicate resources to expanding their capacity to respond to this outbreak, there will be diminishing state capacity to administer the Census coupled with pragmatic challenges caused by the outbreak itself. Any count done under these circumstances would not only fail to properly account for the current American population, but it could also have more targeted negative impacts on communities historically disadvantaged by the state and the census process.

According to the CDC as of March 11th, the novel coronavirus, or COVID-19, has now been detected in over 100 locations internationally as well as 38 states and the District of Columbia.² While there are only 938 reported cases as of now, this number likely represents an undercount of cases across the country due to unmet demand for diagnostic testing. Locations with earlier outbreaks help illustrate this dynamic and emphasize the need for increased caution during this early response stage. In both South Korea and Seattle, for example, after numbers initially stagnated reported cases of coronavirus rose exponentially as both areas increased testing capacity.³ As the nation as a whole continues to expand its testing capacity, the threat posed by COVID-19 will come into full relief. As Director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases Anthony Fauci testified in front of the House Oversight Committee, "we will see more cases, and things will get worse." We must take steps now to ensure that the 2020 Census is prepared to adjust to the new reality that we may soon face.

Unfortunately, the best practices necessary to effectively respond to the coronavirus outbreak actively impede an effective census count. Medical professionals have recommended all individuals practice social distancing to mitigate the risks of spreading the virus. Put simply, social distancing describes actions taken by public health and government officials to stop or slow down the spread of contagious disease by limiting the points of public contact. Common examples of this include closing public gatherings spots, canceling large social gatherings, and limiting or shuttering operations at social institutions. New York State has already declared New Rochelle, NY a containment zone closing schools and large gathering places for at least two weeks.⁵ The nation must take similar aggressive action now to limit the opportunities to transmit the disease in order to avoid facing a similar fate.

Social distancing will make enumeration practically impossible during the current allotted time frame. First and foremost, the April 1st start date for enumeration coincides with what could be the crescendo of the outbreak. Considering the similarity in the rate of infections, government officials across the US may potentially find themselves in situations similar to that of Italy, which chose to effectively place its entire country under quarantine.⁶ Italy went from 76 cases on February 23rd, to 229 cases on the 25th, until cases ballooned to over 12,000 cases as of March 11th.⁷ If the over 900 reported cases represent only the beginning of the outbreak with a similar trajectory, the US could plausibly find itself in the position of asking hundreds of thousands of enumerators to fan out across the country to knock on doors at the height of the outbreak. Enumerators have historically had difficulty breaking through the stigma of a government official knocking on your door thus suggesting the fear of transmission will only amplify this challenge.

Self-reporting will also prove particularly difficult in an environment that does not encourage social gathering. The Census Bureau expects over 60% of Americans to self-respond to the census without interaction from an enumerator.⁸ Eliminating large social gatherings typically used to raise awareness about the importance of the census in conjunction with reduced access to the Internet for marginalized communities will substantially impact the self-response rate and subsequently the accuracy of the overall count. Making matters worse, hard-to-count communities will likely be disproportionately negatively impacted by social distancing policies. The homeless, for example, typically get counted in homeless shelters or other charitable organizations where they may receive mail followed by a counting of those physically on the street. If these sites are closed in order to prevent the transmission of the disease and unnecessary travel remains limited, many Americans like these will simply fall through the cracks of the Census.

Many local jurisdictions also hoped that the Census Bureau's increased emphasis on online submissions would facilitate an elevated self-response rate and help capture historically hard-to-count communities. New Rochelle, NY and New York State again exemplify the difficulties jurisdictions will face regarding online self-reporting. Nearly 10% of residents in Westchester County as well as 13% of residents statewide do not have access to the Internet at home.⁹ These individuals would need access to one of the Census Bureau's outreach sites that provide the public with an opportunity to access the Internet. In 2010, over 6,000 of these sites were libraries¹⁰ and the Census Bureau's Community Partners and Supporters Page suggests a similar number of libraries will house such sites again this year.¹¹ If local businesses and libraries continue to close apace with our current infection trajectory, it would be unrealistic at best to assume the Census will meet its online reporting targets necessary to achieve their targeted response rate. Moreover, 40% of households making less than $20,000 annually in New York State lack an Internet subscription meaning those unable to respond online are those most in need of being counted.

Taken together, the necessary response to COVID-19 demands a set of social actions that create substantial pragmatic barriers to a complete count for the 2020 Census. We urge that the Census Bureau extends the enumeration period at least through September 2020 to allow for further outreach after the immediate response to the virus subsides. While the mandate to conduct the census comes from a Constitutional provision, it does provide for an extension of the enumeration window to the end of the calendar year if necessary. As the Supreme Court and legal scholars have made clear for centuries, the Constitution is not a suicide pact.

In full understanding of the weight of this moment, we implore you to follow the dictates of our Founding Fathers and extend the Census enumeration window.

Dear Director Dillingham,

I am writing to express my concern with how the 2019 Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) will impact Census enumeration in Tribal communities and Native Nations, who are already behind urban communities in enumeration. I would like to understand what the Census Bureau is doing to mitigate these issues.

As you are aware, COVID-19 has forced many communities, including Tribal governments, to issue shelter-in-place orders. These orders have limited the ability of many individuals to obtain forms and return their Census responses. This is particularly true in rural communities, where individuals must drive long distances and visit communal gathering places to use the postal system or the internet. Further, limited postal, phone, and internet access in many Tribal communities and Native Nations means that many of these communities are served by enumerators who must do a physical count.

As you know, the results of the Census are critically important for the distribution of federal funding. Unfortunately, COVID-19 will limit the ability of enumerators to collect responses. I am concerned that the virus will also limit the willingness of individuals to meet with enumerators and further jeopardize an accurate count. For example, the Navajo Nation has been under a shelter-in-place order since March 21, and the State of Arizona since March 30. Additionally, I am concerned that it will be more difficult, if not impossible, to find enumerators able to travel long distances and do counts in rural, Native communities.

As such, I would like your responses to the following questions:

- Do you intend to extend the duration of the Census?
- Do you intend to hire additional enumerators on reservations?
- Do you intend to work with Tribal governments to improve enumeration?

The Census is one of the Federal government's most important responsibilities. I appreciate your hard work to ensure an accurate count, and I look forward to your timely response.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Dillingham:

In light of the unprecedented public health emergency caused by the coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic,¹ we write in strong support of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts's request that you allow colleges and universities to respond to the 2020 Census using administrative data for both on-campus and off-campus students.

The rapid spread of the novel coronavirus and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's recommendations for social distancing have led at least 24 colleges and universities in Massachusetts to move their classes online and instruct most students to leave campus.² This includes such large universities as Harvard University, Boston University, Northeastern University, and the University of Massachusetts system. As a result, Massachusetts's university students are currently dispersed all over the United States and the world.

We are deeply concerned that in the current circumstances, continuing to count students residing in institutions by collecting individual student surveys will result in a drastic undercount for Massachusetts. Your guidance to students and universities thus far has called for students to be counted at their university if that is where they would have resided on April 1, absent temporary closures; however, it will be exceptionally difficult to communicate that message to every student who has been temporarily displaced from their campus community. Because Massachusetts has a high concentration of colleges and universities, under-counting this group would result in the loss of essential funding and services that students rely on while they are living in the Commonwealth.

We therefore urge you to allow the Massachusetts Secretary of State to work with colleges and universities to determine accurate counts using administrative data for all the colleges' and universities' registered students. As Secretary Galvin wrote to you on March 10,³ the Commonwealth is confident that directory records can be used to identify student populations accurately. Allowing for this flexibility will ensure that this unprecedented emergency situation

United States Census Bureau

Director Dillingham:

As Members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, we respectfully urge you and to extend the 2020 Census enumeration by three months ending October 31, 2020. Given the grave concern for public health and well-being we have for our constituents and communities regarding the impacts of the novel coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19), we believe that this is a necessary measure to protect both American citizens and the integrity of the Census. The public health emergency impacting all areas of this country threatens the ability of the Census Bureau to safely and fully conduct the decennial census. Given the instructions and recommendations of the Centers of Disease Control and Prevention, National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, and U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to avoid direct contact with symptomatic persons and the known method of COVID-19 transmission from person-to-person, we foresee that adhering to these principles will limit the ability of enumerators to undertake the non-response follow-up process and will hamper the participation of Americans nationwide. This will particularly impact the ability of the Census Bureau to reach individuals in already hard to count and undercounted communities.

Under the provisions of the U.S. Constitution, the Census Bureau must deliver apportionment counts to the President and Congress by December 31, 2020. While the current end date of July 31, 2020 for collection of enumerations is intended to allow the Census Bureau enough time to tabulate the responses from the enumeration, present circumstances require a change. As COVID-19 and changes to individual and collective social habits could severely depress both the self-response rate and follow-up rate, it is preferable to extend the collection of responses to ensure that everyone is counted, rather than accept what may be a massive undercount. Recognizing that the extension of the enumeration will place a burden on the Census Bureau to provide the official apportionment in time as required by law, we urge the Census Bureau to utilize its contingency funds, and we are supportive of providing emergency funding to the Census Bureau, both for the extended enumeration and expedited tabulation process.

We thank you for your work to ensure that every person in this country is counted. We request that Congress be consulted on any changes to the Census timeline, and that all necessary protections are taken to ensure that communities of color and undercounted communities are counted. Hand and hand with a full count is the need for accurate reporting of data, and the Census Bureau must ensure that this undertaking is also handled with the utmost care. We trust that you share our concerns regarding the effects of COVID-19 on the 2020 Census. As such, we urge you to accept this request for extension, and to work with Congress and our partners across the country to ensure a complete and accurate enumeration.

Sincerely,

Dear Secretary Ross and Director Dillingham:

We write to express our concerns regarding the impact of the novel coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19) on participation and operations for the 2020 Census, particularly as it presents an increased risk of an undercount. We understand that the Census Bureau is actively monitoring the situation in order to adapt operations to ensure a complete and accurate count. As you develop contingency plans, we urge you to consider how historically marginalized communities, people experiencing homelessness, and communities with low broadband access will be reached.

As Members of Congress, we have been working with local, state, and non-government stakeholders to ensure my constituents have adequate opportunities to respond to the 2020 Census. We have secured Mobile Questionnaire Assistance Centers (MQACs) in communities, organized Census job fairs, and coordinated outreach events. By working with trusted community partners, constituents have access to language and technical assistance when completing the Census. Unfortunately, many of these activities involve members of the community coming together.

Due to recent developments around COVID-19, there is increased concern and uncertainty about attending any community events. As a result, large and small events across the country have been canceled. It may seem simple to encourage everyone to respond online. However, this method is not an option for thousands of people.

While we appreciate your work to build a robust online infrastructure, simply pointing people to the online form is insufficient. We urge you to consider alternative options including but not limited to: extending the enumeration period for non-response follow up and for people experiencing homelessness. We believe these steps are necessary to protect public health while ensuring a complete and accurate count.

In order to provide adequate resources to constituents, please provide written responses to the following questions by March 27, 2020:

1. What steps is the Bureau taking to develop contingency plans for the 2020 Census during the current pandemic?
 - a. How will contingency plans address the needs of people with little to no access to broadband?
 - b. How will people living in non-traditional housing be reached?
 - c. How will people experiencing homelessness be reached?
 - d. How will individuals who have been quarantined as a result of COVID-19 be reached?
 - e. How will individuals residing in skilled nursing facilities and nursing facilities be reached? Individuals residing in Department of Veterans Affairs Community Living Centers (VA Nursing Homes)?
2. How will the Census Bureau ensure the health and safety of enumerators?
3. What guidance will you provide to operators of Mobile Questionnaire Centers?
4. What safety precautions is the Census Bureau taking to ensure the health and safety of those staffing and visiting MQCs? How quickly will community partners be expected to adapt to changes set in place by the Bureau as a result of the pandemic?
5. When will the Bureau issue guidance to local, state, and non-government partners that are hosting community events?

Thank you in advance for your responses to these critical questions. We appreciate your efforts to ensure a complete and accurate count.

The Honorable Wilbur L. Ross, Jr.
U.S. Secretary of Commerce
Office of the Secretary
U.S. Department of Commerce
1401 Constitution Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20230

Dear Secretary Ross,

The National Urban League applauds the Census Bureau's recent announcement to further suspend 2020 Census operations due to continued health concerns associated with the Coronavirus. As a two-term former Mayor of New Orleans, Louisiana—a city reportedly experiencing the world's fastest growth in new COVID-19 cases, I fully understand the tremendous caution the Census Bureau must take to protect the public and its employees. At the same time, we are mindful of the Constitutional mandate to conduct a fair and accurate decennial census, notwithstanding an unprecedented national public health crisis that threatens an accurate count of historically undercounted populations.

The National Urban League and leaders of our 2020 Census Black Roundtable (a coalition of civil rights and national leaders, clergy, state and local representative organizations), stand with the Census Bureau as it monitors and adjusts census operations in compliance with rapidly changing public health directives. In doing so, we strongly recommend the Census Bureau undertake the following actions to ensure an accurate count of all populations during this pandemic—especially the black population which already is at high risk of a significant 2020 census undercount, according to recent research (Urban Institute, Pew Research).

Recommendations:

- Amend the 2020 Census Communications Campaign. Provide new messaging, reflecting 1) the current public health crisis of fear, 2) the adjusted 2020 Census operations schedule, and 3) paid advertising for the duration of field operations—including Nonresponse Follow-up (NRFU). Pre-Coronavirus, the 2020 Census paid advertising campaign was originally scheduled to end a month prior to the end of NRFU. Given constantly changing public health directives and ongoing adjustments to 2020 Census operations, targeted advertising and messaging are needed throughout the duration of all field enumerations to ensure a complete count of the hardest to count.

The Honorable Wilbur L. Ross, Jr.

- Strengthen and broadly communicate adjusted plans to the public beyond the Census webpage and media briefings, especially regarding the enumeration of the homeless, off campus college students, and NRFU operations. Partnership Specialists, Complete Count Committees and trusted voices must have accurate, consistent and timely information to communicate these changes and encourage Census participation.
- Immediately ascertain the Census Bureau's ability to sustain Telephone Questionnaire Assistance (TQA) Centers. Growing public health calls for social distancing create workplace safety concerns for TQA call centers whose staff work in close contact with one another and may not return to TQA call centers to work, out of fear of contracting the virus. Confirmed COVID-19 cases at Census facilities and buildings do not help this situation. Pending this decision, a significant communications campaign, will be needed to encourage Internet and paper response, especially for persons with low English proficiency, households without Internet access and persons distrustful of the Internet.
- Increase transparency and engagement with Congressional representatives, Census stakeholders and the public to gain support and increase trust during these difficult times.
- Remove obstacles to Census hiring. Current Census plans to temporarily "pause" applicant fingerprinting as a public health safety precaution to protect employees and job applicants, while necessary, will only exacerbate long-term, systemic 2020 Census hiring backlogs and threaten NRFU operations. While Census has exceeded its 2.5 million recruitment goal this does not equate having 500,000 "boots on the ground," trained and ready for NRFU enumeration.
- End the current piecemeal and confusing, week to week approach of temporarily pausing census operations. Extend the time period for the public to respond to the Census at least 30 days beyond the current August 14th end date, if not longer. President Donald Trump wisely extended the deadline for filing taxes a full three months until July 15, due to the Coronavirus. The same sense of urgency should be applied to the 2020 Census.

In closing, the National Urban League and the 2020 Census Black Roundtable applaud the Census Bureau's recently adapted public advertising campaign messaging to reflect the current public health crisis. It is a great start, but much more is needed. The Urban League and 2020 Census Black Roundtable colleagues have already mobilized in unity for an accurate count and will double our efforts to use the power of our networks as trusted voices to encourage self-response and increased trust in the 2020 Census.

The Honorable Wilbur L. Ross, Jr.

Dr. Steven Dillingham
 Director
 U.S. Census Bureau
 4600 Silver Hill Road
 Suitland, MD 20746

Dear Dr. Dillingham:

We greatly appreciate all that the Census Bureau has done over the past few weeks to alter operations for the 2020 Census in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. As the Census Bureau continues to shift operations to align with evolving public health guidance, the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus (CAPAC) would like to work with you to ensure that the Asian American, Native Hawaiian, and Pacific Islander (AANHPI) community is fully counted in the 2020 Census.

Unfortunately, the COVID-19 crisis has upended the lives of millions of Americans and changed the way we go about our daily lives. Due to social distancing measures and stay-at-home orders in multiple states, many of the in-person outreach strategies the Census Bureau had initially planned to conduct are no longer feasible without posing a significant risk to public health. Much of this outreach was focused on in-person contact by Census staff and Census Partners, such as canvassing, Mobile Questionnaire Assistance, and in-person outreach at events and places where people gather. The Census Bureau emphasized that any gaps in language access and in-language advertising would be addressed at the local level through Census Partners, hiring from within hard-to-count communities, and meeting people where they are. Because it will likely be impossible to execute these strategies as planned during the enumeration period, we urge the Census Bureau to reassess its outreach to limited English proficient (LEP) individuals and other hard-to-count communities.

Although the Census Bureau has demonstrated that Americans across the country are still responding to the 2020 Census, these response rates have been uneven. For instance, many census tracts with a high density of AANHPIs, particularly those in New York, are responding to the census at dramatically lower rates than the country overall. Early analysis of response rates has also shown that the national response rate is lower at this point in the enumeration period than it was in 2010. Furthermore, it has been shown that communities with a high percentage of limited

English proficient individuals have even lower response rates.¹ We are greatly concerned that without traditional outreach methods, as well as innovative methods to mimic the effect of those traditional outreach efforts, an undercount of the AANHPI community and other historically undercounted populations will likely occur.

Accordingly, we urge the Census Bureau to take the following actions to compensate for diminished in-person outreach while ensuring that 2020 Census operations do not pose a threat to public health and safety:

- Bolster Paid Advertising to the AAPI Community: While we applaud the Census Bureau's original outreach strategy that aimed to conduct in-person outreach in 59 languages, it is imperative that the Census Bureau develops a new plan to fill current gaps in its outreach plans to reach LEP persons and other hard-to-count communities. Bolstering paid, in-language advertising is one way to achieve this. We urge the Census Bureau to continue to utilize its robust funding to increase paid advertising for 2020 Census outreach, as well as to expand the number of languages in which paid advertising will be conducted. In particular, we ask that the Census Bureau makes TV ad buys in South Asian languages and other AAPI languages where possible; expand the online and social media advertising program to all 59 languages in which in-person outreach would have been conducted; expand in-languages ad buys in print and radio media to include more AAPI languages; begin an in-language direct mail non-response follow-up program; and continue ad buys throughout the entire enumeration period.
- Utilize Census Partners: As trusted community voices, Census Partners must remain an integral part of the 2020 Census outreach strategy to AANHPIs and other hard to count communities. We urge the Census Bureau to continue to work on finding alternative means for Census Partners to get out the count. While the reach of many Census Partners is limited by social distancing measures, outreach can still be conducted online through social media and email, as well as by mail and by phone.
- Provide Weekly Response Rates to Congress: CAPAC Members have made several requests for data on the progress of the 2020 Census within their respective congressional districts. As the Census Bureau shifts operations to address the COVID-19 pandemic, we ask that the Census Bureau provide all congressional offices with weekly updates on the progress of the 2020 Census. In particular, we ask that the Census Bureau provide a projected response rate for the AANHPI community and other communities of color to the best of its ability. While we are aware that it is impossible to know the response rate by demographic group before tabulation begins, we ask that the Census Bureau use other proxies such as community demographics by geography to track this critical information.

- Address Long Wait Times for Census Call Centers: In order to adapt to the current public health crisis, the Census Bureau implemented social distancing policies in call centers that provide over-the-phone enumeration. An unfortunate consequence of this policy is that wait times increased significantly for respondents who attempted to complete the Census over the phone. Many LEP respondents with limited internet access have been utilizing the phone response option to access in-language assistance. Some of these respondents have reported waiting for extended periods of time on the line for in-language assistance, while others have been unable to connect with operators in their language of choice. The Census Bureau recently announced that the capacity of call centers will be increased to remedy this problem. We applaud the Census Bureau for taking action, but also encourage the Bureau to continue to monitor wait times and adjust accordingly as needed.
- Provide Updates on Staff Demographics: When the Census Bureau is able to safely resume partial or full operations, we ask that the Census Bureau provide us with data on the number of Census field staff that have been onboarded within each congressional district. This data should be disaggregated and include the race, ethnicity, and language capabilities of the onboarded staff, statistics on the degree to which the demographics and language capabilities of onboarded staff are reflective of the communities in which they are performing outreach, and statistics on the number of field staff who are geographically from the communities they are performing outreach to.
- Assess Alternatives to In-Person Outreach: We urge the Census Bureau to continue to refrain from any in-person outreach to non-responding households that may jeopardize public health. Given the well-documented historical undercount of communities of color, we encourage the Census Bureau to consider other means of performing non-response follow-up in order to mitigate the need for in-person follow-up that may disproportionately put the health of communities of color at risk.

In addition to the aforementioned requests, we would also like to ask the Census Bureau to respond to the following questions by no later than Tuesday, April 21, 2020.

1. How is the Census Bureau altering its overall outreach strategy while field operations are suspended?
2. How will this altered strategy reach hard-to-count communities and the AANHPI community in particular?
3. How is the Census Bureau adjusting its communications plan in response to COVID-19?
4. How much funding has the Census Bureau already shifted to the communications program, and how much additional funding does the Census Bureau plan on shifting to the communications program? Please provide as much detail as possible on additional expenditures for advertising and other forms of communication in light of operational adjustments and COVID-19 related challenges.

5. How is the Census Bureau planning on using its carryover funds to adapt operations for the 2020 Census? Please provide as much detail as possible on how carryover funds are being utilized for operational adjustments and COVID-19 related challenges.
6. What is the status of the Census Bureau's planned South Asian language ad buys and what media markets will these ads appear in?
7. What other languages is the Census Bureau planning on expanding their paid media program to?
8. To address the fact that the COVID-19 crisis is changing where people usually are, will the Census Bureau conduct targeted outreach to college students as part of bolstering its paid advertising to ensure students know where they should be counted? Is there a plan to conduct specific outreach to AANHPI students and other hard to count populations, such as partnering with Minority Serving Institutions? Please provide as much detail as possible on how the Bureau will address this issue.
9. What methods for non-response follow-up is the Census Bureau planning on utilizing while in-person outreach is untenable?
10. How is the Census Bureau currently assessing response rates from hard-to-count communities and the AANHPI community in particular?
11. How has the Census Bureau continued to collaborate and work with local Census Partners even though current field operations have been suspended?
12. Households in the insular areas of Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands are enumerated in person and do not have the option of completing the Census online, over the phone, or by mail. How is the Census Bureau planning to ensure that the insular areas are enumerated while field operations are postponed?
13. The Census Bureau recently announced that it is taking steps to decrease wait times for over the phone respondents by reinstating the callback option and making more employees available to respond to requests. How much has capacity been increased at call centers, and what is the increase per call center, per language option, and per language per call center?
14. If the Census Bureau is utilizing remote operators in its call centers, what has the increase in remote operating capacity been, and how does this increase differ by language option? What is the new average wait time overall and per language option?

We appreciate all that the Census Bureau has done to adapt its operations during the COVID-19 pandemic. Please continue to keep us updated whenever significant changes are made regarding the 2020 Census. We look forward to receiving your response to our letter, as well as our continued work together to ensure the AANHPI community is fully counted in the 2020 Census.

April 3, 2020

Dr. Steven Dillingham
Director
United States Census Bureau
4600 Silver Hill Road
Washington, DC 20233

Dear Dr. Dillingham:

As Members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus (CHC), we write to you today regarding the Census Bureau's plans to ensure a full and accurate count in the 2020 Census in light of the current COVID-19 pandemic. As this public health crisis continues to change the ways in which our country operates, we understand that the Census Bureau is currently evaluating changes to the 2020 Census operational plans, all while ensuring the safety of its workers and the public.

We know the Census Bureau has incorporated years of extensive research, testing, and data into its comprehensive decennial census operation, especially with the Bureau's transition to an online census. While we know the Bureau has emergency and disaster-related contingency plans for the decennial operation, we know that the unprecedented public health crisis requires a recalibration of the Bureau's major operations including Update Leave, Update Enumerate, Mobile Questionnaire Assistance, Group Quarters Enumeration, and Non-Response Follow Up. These are challenging times and we commend the Bureau for prioritizing the health and safety above all in its most recent decision to extend the suspension of in-field operations until at least April 15, 2020.

As members of the CHC, we know that our community has a history of being undercounted and that this public health crisis illuminates the very real peril that a lack of representation and sufficient funding for public health programs presents. According to early research coming from the City University of New York Mapping Service, nationwide self-response rates for the 2020 Census are lagging behind self-response rates for the same time period in the 2010 census.¹ We are concerned about what this means for response rates in Latino communities that were already considered hard-to-count. Over the last year, the CHC has met with yourself and with your senior leadership on a quarterly basis and worked in good faith to identify opportunities to work with the Bureau to ensure an accurate count in the 2020 Census.

As we move forward in these uncertain times, we urge the Bureau to continue operating with this partnership in mind and to keep an open line of communication with CHC offices. We understand the ongoing agility that the

COVID-19 pandemic requires of all census leaders to ensure our communities participate in the 2020 Census. In that spirit, we urge the Census Bureau to begin providing reoccurring updates with all relevant data and metrics to our offices of the Bureau's evolving plans to ensure our messaging and actions align with the Bureau's most pressing needs. We respectfully request telephonic briefings or online briefings for our staff to ensure everyone's health and safety.

In particular, we urge the Census Bureau to share updates with our offices on the following topics:

1. Employee Safety. We understand that the Census Bureau has to balance data quality and logistical concerns against the COVID-19 driven imperative to delay operations that require personal contact.
 - a. Can you please share updates on the extent to which behind-the-scenes Census Bureau operations have continued? Please also share updates on the additional steps that the Bureau is taking to ensure employee safety.
 - b. What is the current operational status of the two census data processing facilities in Jefferson, Indiana and in Tucson, Arizona? What steps is the Bureau taking to ensure employee safety?
 - c. We have also heard that there have been COVID-19 cases reported at call centers, or that there is a concern that they will occur, and for that reason phone response capacity is reduced. In view of the paramount importance of self-response mechanisms like the call centers, what is the Bureau doing to get call centers back up to full speed as soon as possible while also meeting public health guidance?
2. Hiring. We understand that the hiring and onboarding processes are currently paused due to the level of in-person interaction that these processes require. We also understand that the Bureau has kept job applications open in case the Bureau needs to hire additional workers in the coming months.
 - a. Can the Census Bureau share more information on where the hiring and onboarding processes stand as of today?
 - b. What percentage of jobs that the Census Bureau originally planned to create have already been filled?
 - c. What is the rate of attrition of people who were hired and trained, but have since resigned from their jobs due to health concerns in light of the COVID-19 pandemic?
 - d. What are the steps that the Bureau is taking to ensure that these pauses are not affecting the long-term response intake process?
 - e. Which additional jobs do you predict you may need to bring on as the Bureau responds to this crisis?
3. Training. We understand that the Bureau has paused in-person trainings and shifted to digital trainings. Can you provide an update on this shift to digital training?
 - a. Which jobs exactly have shifted to digital trainings?
 - b. Are all regions of the country experience equal shifts to digital trainings?
 - c. How is the Bureau accounting for communities with low broadband and internet access like New Mexico as it shifts these trainings to digital platforms?
 - d. Have all hires been notified and updated of these changes as of today?
4. Operations in Hard-to-Count Communities: What resources or efforts can the Bureau shift to places where self-response rates are the lowest and where the Bureau planned to seek out the most in-person contact (Update/Enumerate and Update/Leave census tracts), to best ensure consistency of effort to get out the count?
 - a. Can the Bureau ensure that new hires are deployed in hard-to-count communities? If so, how?

- b. What metrics is the Bureau using to identify tracts and communities where response rates are falling the farthest behind projections and where intensified efforts are and will be most urgently needed?
- c. Can the Bureau share any updates on the Mobile Questionnaire Assistance centers? We know these were specifically planned to assist communities with a history of low response rates.
 - i. Who is the Bureau consulting with to reach a final decision on mobile questionnaire assistance centers?
 - ii. If these centers are suspended indefinitely, how will the Bureau deploy the funding appropriated by Congress specifically for these centers? Will the Bureau commit to consulting Members of Congress before reaching a final decision with regards to Mobile Questionnaire Assistance Centers?
- d. Further, we understand that Puerto Rico was supposed to be a 100-percent Update Leave Operation because of previous natural disasters and a lack of clarity about which addresses were still occupied. Please share with our caucus how far along in the Update Leave Operation the Census Bureau got before pausing due to COVID-19 precautions? Please share all pertinent data on how COVID-19 is affecting the response rate in Puerto Rico, if at all, and what the Census Bureau's plans are to address this?

5. Community Partners. How is the Census Bureau effectively coordinating with its community partners across the country and in our congressional districts to ensure aligned messaging and outreach efforts?

- a. Is the Census Bureau holding regular updates for its community partners?

6. Communications Plan. We understand that the Bureau is in the middle of shifting its communications plan to align with new messaging that is mindful of COVID-19. Can the Bureau provide an update on when we can expect this new communications plan?

- a. What percentage of the Bureau's messaging plan will be in Spanish? And in which media markets? Will previous allocations change in response to the national emergency?
- b. Which trusted Spanish media outlets and networks is the Bureau working with to ensure that Hispanic and Latino communities receive this message?
- c. How is or isn't the Bureau incorporating stay-at-home orders across different states into its decision-making for its new communications plan?
- d. How is the Bureau making sure that individuals in historically hard to count communities that may be under a stay-at-home order and have low access to broadband are being communicated to on how to complete the 2020 Census?
- e. Will the Bureau work with local and state elected officials to obtain special permission, as needed, to conduct any enumeration efforts that are consistent with social distancing guidelines, but may go beyond the bounds of allowed activities under stay-at-home orders?

7. Census Timeline. Can you confirm whether the Bureau still anticipates delivering a count to the Office of the President by December 31, 2020?

- a. Can you confirm where the Bureau stands on extending the census data tabulation period?
- b. If the Bureau believes in keeping the current time frame for the data tabulation period, can the Bureau please share any experientially based projections of how data accuracy degrades in relation to time elapsed since Census Day on April 1, 2020.

8. Census Bureau Funding. Is the Bureau still adequately funded to deliver on its constitutional mandate given the challenges presented by COVID-19? We urge the Bureau to provide our offices with continuous updates on the amount of contingency funds spent or projected to be spent so we can adjust Fiscal Year 2021 appropriations in accordance.

- a. To date, has the Bureau started using its contingency funds? If so, where are these contingency funds being allocated? What portion, if any, has gone directly to equipment to ensure the health and safety of Census Bureau employees?
- b. As we continue to amplify the ability to self-respond, can or has the Bureau used contingency funding to set up a system that would allow operators to take calls over the internet from any remote locations in light of health concerns?

As the Census Bureau continues to evaluate next steps, we urge you to work with us and other Members of Congress to reach a well-informed and widely accepted decisions, specifically with regards to timeline changes and adjustments. We look forward to continuing working together to ensure an accurate and complete count of our communities in the 2020 Census.

We appreciate your time to review these questions and look forward to receiving your responses by April 10, 2020.

Perhaps Ali can extract from the attached high level summary-

Draft 4-17-2020 v5

High Level Talking Points Post-Processing Activities and Timelines

What is post processing and why is it important?

Post processing refers to the Census Bureau's processes to summarize the individual and household data that we collect into usable, high quality tabulated data products. Our post processing systems and processes are standardized, tested, and subject to thorough quality assurance procedures so that we can stand behind the data that we produce.

What activities are part of post processing?

There are a number of steps in post processing. At a very high level, post processing starts by merging and standardizing the format of the data we receive from different sources: self-response data from Internet, telephone, and paper questionnaires; response data from our specialized operations (like Group Quarters Enumeration, Service Based Enumeration, etc.), and nonresponse followup responses collected by census field staff. We conduct automated and clerical coding of write-in responses. In a small number of housing units we may receive multiple responses. When that happens we determine the response of record. We conduct geographic processing activities, such as geocoding which assigns an address to a block. We perform statistical techniques to account for missing housing unit status and occupancy information and we receive counts for the Federally Affiliated Overseas population. We then calculate the apportionment counts, and conduct the statutory apportionment calculation to determine the number of seats each State is entitled to in the U.S. House of Representatives.

After production of the apportionment counts (the resident population plus the overseas counts for each state), we conduct additional processing of the characteristic data about respondents. We perform statistical techniques to account for missing or conflicting characteristic data. We conduct modern disclosure avoidance techniques on the response file to honor our statutory requirement to protect each individual's confidential information. Then we tabulate the redistricting data and release it to states.

At every step listed above, we conduct and document rigorous testing and quality assurance of our work. This includes evaluating census responses and post processing data files at multiple levels of geography compared to multiple sets of benchmark data to ensure the demographic reasonableness of the data and verify that post processing procedures are properly applied.

Why does post processing take so long?

As is evident from the description above, post processing activities must, by their nature, occur in a consecutive sequence, and quality assurance needs to be performed at each step of the process. Subject matter expert review is critical to ensuring the quality of the data during this iterative process. It is important to note post processing cannot begin in earnest until all in-field work is completed. We have examined our schedule and compressed it as much as we can without risking significant impacts on data quality. Given the important uses of census data collection processing, it is vital that we not short cut these efforts or quality assurance steps.

What schedule changes are you making?

The Census Act requires the Census Bureau to produce apportionment counts by 12/31/20 and redistricting data by 3/31/21. Our plan was to release the apportionment counts the week before Christmas, and to release the redistricting data over a six-week period from mid-February to late March, 2021.

Under the revised schedule, we will produce the apportionment counts by 4/30/2021 and the redistricting data by 7/31/2021.

What are the implications to post processing of the COVID-19 schedule delays?

DP

We announced this necessary schedule change as early as possible to provide states the maximum possible time to adapt their local processes. The Census Bureau will continue to look for actions it can take to reduce the impact of this change on the states.

Congress of the United States
Washington, DC 20515

March 12, 2020

The Honorable Wilbur L. Ross, Jr.
Secretary
U.S. Department of Commerce
1401 Constitution Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20230

Dear Secretary Ross:

We write to express our concern about the potential impact that the coronavirus, COVID-19, may have on the 2020 Census. With the census in full swing, we request a detailed account of the plans and actions being taken to prevent any disruption to 2020 Census operations and to ensure a fair and accurate count. We are particularly concerned about the impact on hard-to-count communities, which the Census Bureau has acknowledged are more likely to respond to in-person census enumerators, rather than to census forms completed by mail or online.¹

We request that the Department provide a briefing to our staffs with detailed information on contingency plans, steps taken, policies to be implemented, and coordination efforts to mitigate the potential impact of this outbreak on the 2020 Census. Please also provide written responses to the following questions by March 19, 2020:

1. What contingency plans does the Census Bureau have in place for potential epidemics during the 2020 Census?
2. How does the Census Bureau anticipate COVID-19 may impact the 2020 Census, including in the following areas:
 - a. Recruiting, hiring, onboarding, and retention of census workers;
 - b. Self-response;
 - c. Non-response follow-up; and
 - d. Group quarters enumeration?
3. What steps is the Census Bureau taking or planning to take to mitigate the impact in these same areas? What role does the Department expect the previously announced Census fusion center to play?
4. How has the Census Bureau coordinated with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Department of Health and Human Services, the White House Coronavirus Task Force, and state and local health departments to develop protocols in response to the potential threat of COVID-19?

5. Does the Census Bureau plan to utilize its appropriated contingency funding to address the potential impact of COVID-19 on the 2020 Census?² If there are no plans to do so at this time, how will the Bureau evaluate the necessity of using these funds?
6. How does the Census Bureau plan to promote high self-response rates for households, including those who may eventually be under quarantine or isolation? Will the Bureau be issuing any public guidance or amending its advertising and outreach campaign?
7. What information has the Census Bureau communicated to staff, including 2020 Census Takers, regarding actions and policy changes in response to COVID-19, including with respect to non-response follow-up operations?
8. What steps is the Census Bureau taking to protect the health of census workers?
9. Is the Census Bureau considering extending the time period for self-response, non-response follow-up, or group quarters enumeration? If not, will the Bureau revisit that decision depending on conditions in the coming weeks?
10. Is the Census Bureau communicating with colleges and universities that have cancelled classes or asked students to leave campus in order to clarify where to count those students on April 1, 2020?

We look forward to your responses to these requests and to working together to ensure a successful 2020 Census. If you have any questions, please contact Appropriations Committee staff at (202) 225-3351 or Oversight Committee staff at (202) 225-5051.

The Honorable Secretary Wilber Ross
US Department of Commerce
1401 Constitution Ave NW
Washington, DC 20230

Dear Secretary Ross,

We write you today to impress upon you the necessity of extending the enumeration period for the 2020 Census due to the social disruption caused by COVID-19. The Census Bureau currently plans to begin enumeration on April 1st followed by a series of follow-ups to be concluded by the end of July. On March 11th, the World Health Organization declared the COVID-19 a global pandemic and civil society has responded accordingly with institutions across the country beginning to close down non-essential operations in order to slow the spread of the virus.¹ As states and local jurisdictions continue to dedicate resources to expanding their capacity to respond to this outbreak, there will be diminishing state capacity to administer the Census coupled with pragmatic challenges caused by the outbreak itself. Any count done under these circumstances would not only fail to properly account for the current American population, but it could also have more targeted negative impacts on communities historically disadvantaged by the state and the census process.

According to the CDC as of March 11th, the novel coronavirus, or COVID-19, has now been detected in over 100 locations internationally as well as 38 states and the District of Columbia.² While there are only 938 reported cases as of now, this number likely represents an undercount of cases across the country due to unmet demand for diagnostic testing. Locations with earlier outbreaks help illustrate this dynamic and emphasize the need for increased caution during this early response stage. In both South Korea and Seattle, for example, after numbers initially stagnated reported cases of coronavirus rose exponentially as both areas increased testing capacity.³ As the nation as a whole continues to expand its testing capacity, the threat posed by COVID-19 will come into full relief. As Director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases Anthony Fauci testified in front of the House Oversight Committee, "we will see more cases, and things will get worse." We must take steps now to ensure that the 2020 Census is prepared to adjust to the new reality that we may soon face.

Unfortunately, the best practices necessary to effectively respond to the coronavirus outbreak actively impede an effective census count. Medical professionals have recommended all individuals practice social distancing to mitigate the risks of spreading the virus. Put simply, social distancing describes actions taken by public health and government officials to stop or slow down the spread of contagious disease by limiting the points of public contact. Common examples of this include closing public gatherings spots, canceling large social gatherings, and limiting or shuttering operations at social institutions. New York State has already declared New Rochelle, NY a containment zone closing schools and large gathering places for at least two weeks.⁵ The nation must take similar aggressive action now to limit the opportunities to transmit the disease in order to avoid facing a similar fate.

Social distancing will make enumeration practically impossible during the current allotted time frame. First and foremost, the April 1st start date for enumeration coincides with what could be the crescendo of the outbreak. Considering the similarity in the rate of infections, government officials across the US may potentially find themselves in situations similar to that of Italy, which chose to effectively place its entire country under quarantine.⁶ Italy went from 76 cases on February 23rd, to 229 cases on the 25th, until cases ballooned to over 12,000 cases as of March 11th.⁷ If the over 900 reported cases represent only the beginning of the outbreak with a similar trajectory, the US could plausibly find itself in the position of asking hundreds of thousands of enumerators to fan out across the country to knock on doors at the height of the outbreak. Enumerators have historically had difficulty breaking through the stigma of a government official knocking on your door thus suggesting the fear of transmission will only amplify this challenge.

Self-reporting will also prove particularly difficult in an environment that does not encourage social gathering. The Census Bureau expects over 60% of Americans to self-respond to the census without interaction from an enumerator.⁸ Eliminating large social gatherings typically used to raise awareness about the importance of the census in conjunction with reduced access to the Internet for marginalized communities will substantially impact the self-response rate and subsequently the accuracy of the overall count. Making matters worse, hard-to-count communities will likely be disproportionately negatively impacted by social distancing policies. The homeless, for example, typically get counted in homeless shelters or other charitable organizations where they may receive mail followed by a counting of those physically on the street. If these sites are closed in order to prevent the transmission of the disease and unnecessary travel remains limited, many Americans like these will simply fall through the cracks of the Census.

Many local jurisdictions also hoped that the Census Bureau's increased emphasis on online submissions would facilitate an elevated self-response rate and help capture historically hard-to-count communities. New Rochelle, NY and New York State again exemplify the difficulties jurisdictions will face regarding online self-reporting. Nearly 10% of residents in Westchester County as well as 13% of residents statewide do not have access to the Internet at home.⁹ These individuals would need access to one of the Census Bureau's outreach sites that provide the public with an opportunity to access the Internet. In 2010, over 6,000 of these sites were libraries¹⁰ and the Census Bureau's Community Partners and Supporters Page suggests a similar number of libraries will house such sites again this year.¹¹ If local businesses and libraries continue to close apace with our current infection trajectory, it would be unrealistic at best to assume the Census will meet its online reporting targets necessary to achieve their targeted response rate. Moreover, 40% of households making less than $20,000 annually in New York State lack an Internet subscription meaning those unable to respond online are those most in need of being counted.

Taken together, the necessary response to COVID-19 demands a set of social actions that create substantial pragmatic barriers to a complete count for the 2020 Census. We urge that the Census Bureau extends the enumeration period at least through September 2020 to allow for further outreach after the immediate response to the virus subsides. While the mandate to conduct the census comes from a Constitutional provision, it does provide for an extension of the enumeration window to the end of the calendar year if necessary. As the Supreme Court and legal scholars have made clear for centuries, the Constitution is not a suicide pact.

In full understanding of the weight of this moment, we implore you to follow the dictates of our Founding Fathers and extend the Census enumeration window.

Dear Director Dillingham,

I am writing to express my concern with how the 2019 Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) will impact Census enumeration in Tribal communities and Native Nations, who are already behind urban communities in enumeration. I would like to understand what the Census Bureau is doing to mitigate these issues.

As you are aware, COVID-19 has forced many communities, including Tribal governments, to issue shelter-in-place orders. These orders have limited the ability of many individuals to obtain forms and return their Census responses. This is particularly true in rural communities, where individuals must drive long distances and visit communal gathering places to use the postal system or the internet. Further, limited postal, phone, and internet access in many Tribal communities and Native Nations means that many of these communities are served by enumerators who must do a physical count.

As you know, the results of the Census are critically important for the distribution of federal funding. Unfortunately, COVID-19 will limit the ability of enumerators to collect responses. I am concerned that the virus will also limit the willingness of individuals to meet with enumerators and further jeopardize an accurate count. For example, the Navajo Nation has been under a shelter-in-place order since March 21, and the State of Arizona since March 30. Additionally, I am concerned that it will be more difficult, if not impossible, to find enumerators able to travel long distances and do counts in rural, Native communities.

As such, I would like your responses to the following questions:

- Do you intend to extend the duration of the Census?
- Do you intend to hire additional enumerators on reservations?
- Do you intend to work with Tribal governments to improve enumeration?

The Census is one of the Federal government's most important responsibilities. I appreciate your hard work to ensure an accurate count, and I look forward to your timely response.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Dillingham:

In light of the unprecedented public health emergency caused by the coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic,¹ we write in strong support of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts's request that you allow colleges and universities to respond to the 2020 Census using administrative data for both on-campus and off-campus students.

The rapid spread of the novel coronavirus and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's recommendations for social distancing have led at least 24 colleges and universities in Massachusetts to move their classes online and instruct most students to leave campus.² This includes such large universities as Harvard University, Boston University, Northeastern University, and the University of Massachusetts system. As a result, Massachusetts's university students are currently dispersed all over the United States and the world.

We are deeply concerned that in the current circumstances, continuing to count students residing in institutions by collecting individual student surveys will result in a drastic undercount for Massachusetts. Your guidance to students and universities thus far has called for students to be counted at their university if that is where they would have resided on April 1, absent temporary closures; however, it will be exceptionally difficult to communicate that message to every student who has been temporarily displaced from their campus community. Because Massachusetts has a high concentration of colleges and universities, under-counting this group would result in the loss of essential funding and services that students rely on while they are living in the Commonwealth.

We therefore urge you to allow the Massachusetts Secretary of State to work with colleges and universities to determine accurate counts using administrative data for all the colleges' and universities' registered students. As Secretary Galvin wrote to you on March 10,³ the Commonwealth is confident that directory records can be used to identify student populations accurately. Allowing for this flexibility will ensure that this unprecedented emergency situation

Director Dillingham:

As Members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, we respectfully urge you and to extend the 2020 Census enumeration by three months ending October 31, 2020. Given the grave concern for public health and well-being we have for our constituents and communities regarding the impacts of the novel coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19), we believe that this is a necessary measure to protect both American citizens and the integrity of the Census. The public health emergency impacting all areas of this country threatens the ability of the Census Bureau to safely and fully conduct the decennial census. Given the instructions and recommendations of the Centers of Disease Control and Prevention, National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, and U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to avoid direct contact with symptomatic persons and the known method of COVID-19 transmission from person-to-person, we foresee that adhering to these principles will limit the ability of enumerators to undertake the non-response follow-up process and will hamper the participation of Americans nationwide. This will particularly impact the ability of the Census Bureau to reach individuals in already hard to count and undercounted communities.

Under the provisions of the U.S. Constitution, the Census Bureau must deliver apportionment counts to the President and Congress by December 31, 2020. While the current end date of July 31, 2020 for collection of enumerations is intended to allow the Census Bureau enough time to tabulate the responses from the enumeration, present circumstances require a change. As COVID-19 and changes to individual and collective social habits could severely depress both the self-response rate and follow-up rate, it is preferable to extend the collection of responses to ensure that everyone is counted, rather than accept what may be a massive undercount. Recognizing that the extension of the enumeration will place a burden on the Census Bureau to provide the official apportionment in time as required by law, we urge the Census Bureau to utilize its contingency funds, and we are supportive of providing emergency funding to the Census Bureau, both for the extended enumeration and expedited tabulation process.

We thank you for your work to ensure that every person in this country is counted. We request that Congress be consulted on any changes to the Census timeline, and that all necessary protections are taken to ensure that communities of color and undercounted communities are counted. Hand and hand with a full count is the need for accurate reporting of data, and the Census Bureau must ensure that this undertaking is also handled with the utmost care. We trust that you share our concerns regarding the effects of COVID-19 on the 2020 Census. As such, we urge you to accept this request for extension, and to work with Congress and our partners across the country to ensure a complete and accurate enumeration.

Sincerely,

Dear Secretary Ross and Director Dillingham:

We write to express our concerns regarding the impact of the novel coronavirus 2019 (COVID-19) on participation and operations for the 2020 Census, particularly as it presents an increased risk of an undercount. We understand that the Census Bureau is actively monitoring the situation in order to adapt operations to ensure a complete and accurate count. As you develop contingency plans, we urge you to consider how historically marginalized communities, people experiencing homelessness, and communities with low broadband access will be reached.

As Members of Congress, we have been working with local, state, and non-government stakeholders to ensure my constituents have adequate opportunities to respond to the 2020 Census. We have secured Mobile Questionnaire Assistance Centers (MQACs) in communities, organized Census job fairs, and coordinated outreach events. By working with trusted community partners, constituents have access to language and technical assistance when completing the Census. Unfortunately, many of these activities involve members of the community coming together.

Due to recent developments around COVID-19, there is increased concern and uncertainty about attending any community events. As a result, large and small events across the country have been canceled. It may seem simple to encourage everyone to respond online. However, this method is not an option for thousands of people.

While we appreciate your work to build a robust online infrastructure, simply pointing people to the online form is insufficient. We urge you to consider alternative options including but not limited to: extending the enumeration period for non-response follow up and for people experiencing homelessness. We believe these steps are necessary to protect public health while ensuring a complete and accurate count.

In order to provide adequate resources to constituents, please provide written responses to the following questions by March 27, 2020:

1. What steps is the Bureau taking to develop contingency plans for the 2020 Census during the current pandemic?
 - a. How will contingency plans address the needs of people with little to no access to broadband?
 - b. How will people living in non-traditional housing be reached?
 - c. How will people experiencing homelessness be reached?
 - d. How will individuals who have been quarantined as a result of COVID-19 be reached?
 - e. How will individuals residing in skilled nursing facilities and nursing facilities be reached? Individuals residing in Department of Veterans Affairs Community Living Centers (VA Nursing Homes)?
2. How will the Census Bureau ensure the health and safety of enumerators?
3. What guidance will you provide to operators of Mobile Questionnaire Centers?
4. What safety precautions is the Census Bureau taking to ensure the health and safety of those staffing and visiting MQCs? How quickly will community partners be expected to adapt to changes set in place by the Bureau as a result of the pandemic?
5. When will the Bureau issue guidance to local, state, and non-government partners that are hosting community events?

Thank you in advance for your responses to these critical questions. We appreciate your efforts to ensure a complete and accurate count.

The Honorable Wilbur L. Ross, Jr.
U.S. Secretary of Commerce
Office of the Secretary
U.S. Department of Commerce
1401 Constitution Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20230

Dear Secretary Ross,

The National Urban League applauds the Census Bureau's recent announcement to further suspend 2020 Census operations due to continued health concerns associated with the Coronavirus. As a two-term former Mayor of New Orleans, Louisiana—a city reportedly experiencing the world's fastest growth in new COVID-19 cases, I fully understand the tremendous caution the Census Bureau must take to protect the public and its employees. At the same time, we are mindful of the Constitutional mandate to conduct a fair and accurate decennial census, notwithstanding an unprecedented national public health crisis that threatens an accurate count of historically undercounted populations.

The National Urban League and leaders of our 2020 Census Black Roundtable (a coalition of civil rights and national leaders, clergy, state and local representative organizations), stand with the Census Bureau as it monitors and adjusts census operations in compliance with rapidly changing public health directives. In doing so, we strongly recommend the Census Bureau undertake the following actions to ensure an accurate count of all populations during this pandemic—especially the black population which already is at high risk of a significant 2020 census undercount, according to recent research (Urban Institute, Pew Research).

Recommendations:

- Amend the 2020 Census Communications Campaign. Provide new messaging, reflecting 1) the current public health crisis of fear, 2) the adjusted 2020 Census operations schedule, and 3) paid advertising for the duration of field operations—including Nonresponse Follow-up (NRFU). Pre-Coronavirus, the 2020 Census paid advertising campaign was originally scheduled to end a month prior to the end of NRFU. Given constantly changing public health directives and ongoing adjustments to 2020 Census operations, targeted advertising and messaging are needed throughout the duration of all field enumerations to ensure a complete count of the hardest to count.

The Honorable Wilbur L. Ross, Jr.

- Strengthen and broadly communicate adjusted plans to the public beyond the Census webpage and media briefings, especially regarding the enumeration of the homeless, off campus college students, and NRFU operations. Partnership Specialists, Complete Count Committees and trusted voices must have accurate, consistent and timely information to communicate these changes and encourage Census participation.
- Immediately ascertain the Census Bureau's ability to sustain Telephone Questionnaire Assistance (TQA) Centers. Growing public health calls for social distancing create workplace safety concerns for TQA call centers whose staff work in close contact with one another and may not return to TQA call centers to work, out of fear of contracting the virus. Confirmed COVID-19 cases at Census facilities and buildings do not help this situation. Pending this decision, a significant communications campaign, will be needed to encourage Internet and paper response, especially for persons with low English proficiency, households without Internet access and persons distrustful of the Internet.
- Increase transparency and engagement with Congressional representatives, Census stakeholders and the public to gain support and increase trust during these difficult times.
- Remove obstacles to Census hiring. Current Census plans to temporarily "pause" applicant fingerprinting as a public health safety precaution to protect employees and job applicants, while necessary, will only exacerbate long-term, systemic 2020 Census hiring backlogs and threaten NRFU operations. While Census has exceeded its 2.5 million recruitment goal this does not equate having 500,000 "boots on the ground," trained and ready for NRFU enumeration.
- End the current piecemeal and confusing, week to week approach of temporarily pausing census operations. Extend the time period for the public to respond to the Census at least 30 days beyond the current August 14th end date, if not longer. President Donald Trump wisely extended the deadline for filing taxes a full three months until July 15, due to the Coronavirus. The same sense of urgency should be applied to the 2020 Census.

In closing, the National Urban League and the 2020 Census Black Roundtable applaud the Census Bureau's recently adapted public advertising campaign messaging to reflect the current public health crisis. It is a great start, but much more is needed. The Urban League and 2020 Census Black Roundtable colleagues have already mobilized in unity for an accurate count and will double our efforts to use the power of our networks as trusted voices to encourage self-response and increased trust in the 2020 Census.

Dr. Steven Dillingham
 Director
 U.S. Census Bureau
 4600 Silver Hill Road
 Suitland, MD 20746

Dear Dr. Dillingham:

We greatly appreciate all that the Census Bureau has done over the past few weeks to alter operations for the 2020 Census in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. As the Census Bureau continues to shift operations to align with evolving public health guidance, the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus (CAPAC) would like to work with you to ensure that the Asian American, Native Hawaiian, and Pacific Islander (AANHPI) community is fully counted in the 2020 Census.

Unfortunately, the COVID-19 crisis has upended the lives of millions of Americans and changed the way we go about our daily lives. Due to social distancing measures and stay-at-home orders in multiple states, many of the in-person outreach strategies the Census Bureau had initially planned to conduct are no longer feasible without posing a significant risk to public health. Much of this outreach was focused on in-person contact by Census staff and Census Partners, such as canvassing, Mobile Questionnaire Assistance, and in-person outreach at events and places where people gather. The Census Bureau emphasized that any gaps in language access and in-language advertising would be addressed at the local level through Census Partners, hiring from within hard-to-count communities, and meeting people where they are. Because it will likely be impossible to execute these strategies as planned during the enumeration period, we urge the Census Bureau to reassess its outreach to limited English proficient (LEP) individuals and other hard-to-count communities.

Although the Census Bureau has demonstrated that Americans across the country are still responding to the 2020 Census, these response rates have been uneven. For instance, many census tracts with a high density of AANHPIs, particularly those in New York, are responding to the census at dramatically lower rates than the country overall. Early analysis of response rates has also shown that the national response rate is lower at this point in the enumeration period than it was in 2010. Furthermore, it has been shown that communities with a high percentage of limited

English proficient individuals have even lower response rates.¹ We are greatly concerned that without traditional outreach methods, as well as innovative methods to mimic the effect of those traditional outreach efforts, an undercount of the AANHPI community and other historically undercounted populations will likely occur.

Accordingly, we urge the Census Bureau to take the following actions to compensate for diminished in-person outreach while ensuring that 2020 Census operations do not pose a threat to public health and safety:

- Bolster Paid Advertising to the AAPI Community: While we applaud the Census Bureau's original outreach strategy that aimed to conduct in-person outreach in 59 languages, it is imperative that the Census Bureau develops a new plan to fill current gaps in its outreach plans to reach LEP persons and other hard-to-count communities. Bolstering paid, in-language advertising is one way to achieve this. We urge the Census Bureau to continue to utilize its robust funding to increase paid advertising for 2020 Census outreach, as well as to expand the number of languages in which paid advertising will be conducted. In particular, we ask that the Census Bureau makes TV ad buys in South Asian languages and other AAPI languages where possible; expand the online and social media advertising program to all 59 languages in which in-person outreach would have been conducted; expand in-languages ad buys in print and radio media to include more AAPI languages; begin an in-language direct mail non-response follow-up program; and continue ad buys throughout the entire enumeration period.
- Utilize Census Partners: As trusted community voices, Census Partners must remain an integral part of the 2020 Census outreach strategy to AANHPIs and other hard to count communities. We urge the Census Bureau to continue to work on finding alternative means for Census Partners to get out the count. While the reach of many Census Partners is limited by social distancing measures, outreach can still be conducted online through social media and email, as well as by mail and by phone.
- Provide Weekly Response Rates to Congress: CAPAC Members have made several requests for data on the progress of the 2020 Census within their respective congressional districts. As the Census Bureau shifts operations to address the COVID-19 pandemic, we ask that the Census Bureau provide all congressional offices with weekly updates on the progress of the 2020 Census. In particular, we ask that the Census Bureau provide a projected response rate for the AANHPI community and other communities of color to the best of its ability. While we are aware that it is impossible to know the response rate by demographic group before tabulation begins, we ask that the Census Bureau use other proxies such as community demographics by geography to track this critical information.

- Address Long Wait Times for Census Call Centers: In order to adapt to the current public health crisis, the Census Bureau implemented social distancing policies in call centers that provide over-the-phone enumeration. An unfortunate consequence of this policy is that wait times increased significantly for respondents who attempted to complete the Census over the phone. Many LEP respondents with limited internet access have been utilizing the phone response option to access in-language assistance. Some of these respondents have reported waiting for extended periods of time on the line for in-language assistance, while others have been unable to connect with operators in their language of choice. The Census Bureau recently announced that the capacity of call centers will be increased to remedy this problem. We applaud the Census Bureau for taking action, but also encourage the Bureau to continue to monitor wait times and adjust accordingly as needed.
- Provide Updates on Staff Demographics: When the Census Bureau is able to safely resume partial or full operations, we ask that the Census Bureau provide us with data on the number of Census field staff that have been onboarded within each congressional district. This data should be disaggregated and include the race, ethnicity, and language capabilities of the onboarded staff, statistics on the degree to which the demographics and language capabilities of onboarded staff are reflective of the communities in which they are performing outreach, and statistics on the number of field staff who are geographically from the communities they are performing outreach to.
- Assess Alternatives to In-Person Outreach: We urge the Census Bureau to continue to refrain from any in-person outreach to non-responding households that may jeopardize public health. Given the well-documented historical undercount of communities of color, we encourage the Census Bureau to consider other means of performing non-response follow-up in order to mitigate the need for in-person follow-up that may disproportionately put the health of communities of color at risk.

In addition to the aforementioned requests, we would also like to ask the Census Bureau to respond to the following questions by no later than Tuesday, April 21, 2020.

1. How is the Census Bureau altering its overall outreach strategy while field operations are suspended?
2. How will this altered strategy reach hard-to-count communities and the AANHPI community in particular?
3. How is the Census Bureau adjusting its communications plan in response to COVID-19?
4. How much funding has the Census Bureau already shifted to the communications program, and how much additional funding does the Census Bureau plan on shifting to the communications program? Please provide as much detail as possible on additional expenditures for advertising and other forms of communication in light of operational adjustments and COVID-19 related challenges.

5. How is the Census Bureau planning on using its carryover funds to adapt operations for the 2020 Census? Please provide as much detail as possible on how carryover funds are being utilized for operational adjustments and COVID-19 related challenges.
6. What is the status of the Census Bureau's planned South Asian language ad buys and what media markets will these ads appear in?
7. What other languages is the Census Bureau planning on expanding their paid media program to?
8. To address the fact that the COVID-19 crisis is changing where people usually are, will the Census Bureau conduct targeted outreach to college students as part of bolstering its paid advertising to ensure students know where they should be counted? Is there a plan to conduct specific outreach to AANHPI students and other hard to count populations, such as partnering with Minority Serving Institutions? Please provide as much detail as possible on how the Bureau will address this issue.
9. What methods for non-response follow-up is the Census Bureau planning on utilizing while in-person outreach is untenable?
10. How is the Census Bureau currently assessing response rates from hard-to-count communities and the AANHPI community in particular?
11. How has the Census Bureau continued to collaborate and work with local Census Partners even though current field operations have been suspended?
12. Households in the insular areas of Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the U.S. Virgin Islands are enumerated in person and do not have the option of completing the Census online, over the phone, or by mail. How is the Census Bureau planning to ensure that the insular areas are enumerated while field operations are postponed?
13. The Census Bureau recently announced that it is taking steps to decrease wait times for over the phone respondents by reinstating the callback option and making more employees available to respond to requests. How much has capacity been increased at call centers, and what is the increase per call center, per language option, and per language per call center?
14. If the Census Bureau is utilizing remote operators in its call centers, what has the increase in remote operating capacity been, and how does this increase differ by language option? What is the new average wait time overall and per language option?

We appreciate all that the Census Bureau has done to adapt its operations during the COVID-19 pandemic. Please continue to keep us updated whenever significant changes are made regarding the 2020 Census. We look forward to receiving your response to our letter, as well as our continued work together to ensure the AANHPI community is fully counted in the 2020 Census.

116TH CONGRESS

April 3, 2020

Dr. Steven Dillingham
Director
United States Census Bureau
4600 Silver Hill Road
Washington, DC 20233

Dear Dr. Dillingham:

As Members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus (CHC), we write to you today regarding the Census Bureau's plans to ensure a full and accurate count in the 2020 Census in light of the current COVID-19 pandemic. As this public health crisis continues to change the ways in which our country operates, we understand that the Census Bureau is currently evaluating changes to the 2020 Census operational plans, all while ensuring the safety of its workers and the public.

We know the Census Bureau has incorporated years of extensive research, testing, and data into its comprehensive decennial census operation, especially with the Bureau's transition to an online census. While we know the Bureau has emergency and disaster-related contingency plans for the decennial operation, we know that the unprecedented public health crisis requires a recalibration of the Bureau's major operations including Update Leave, Update Enumerate, Mobile Questionnaire Assistance, Group Quarters Enumeration, and Non-Response Follow Up. These are challenging times and we commend the Bureau for prioritizing the health and safety above all in its most recent decision to extend the suspension of in-field operations until at least April 15, 2020.

As members of the CHC, we know that our community has a history of being undercounted and that this public health crisis illuminates the very real peril that a lack of representation and sufficient funding for public health programs presents. According to early research coming from the City University of New York Mapping Service, nationwide self-response rates for the 2020 Census are lagging behind self-response rates for the same time period in the 2010 census.¹ We are concerned about what this means for response rates in Latino communities that were already considered hard-to-count. Over the last year, the CHC has met with yourself and with your senior leadership on a quarterly basis and worked in good faith to identify opportunities to work with the Bureau to ensure an accurate count in the 2020 Census.

As we move forward in these uncertain times, we urge the Bureau to continue operating with this partnership in mind and to keep an open line of communication with CHC offices. We understand the ongoing agility that the

COVID-19 pandemic requires of all census leaders to ensure our communities participate in the 2020 Census. In that spirit, we urge the Census Bureau to begin providing reoccurring updates with all relevant data and metrics to our offices of the Bureau's evolving plans to ensure our messaging and actions align with the Bureau's most pressing needs. We respectfully request telephonic briefings or online briefings for our staff to ensure everyone's health and safety.

In particular, we urge the Census Bureau to share updates with our offices on the following topics:

1. Employee Safety. We understand that the Census Bureau has to balance data quality and logistical concerns against the COVID-19 driven imperative to delay operations that require personal contact.
 - a. Can you please share updates on the extent to which behind-the-scenes Census Bureau operations have continued? Please also share updates on the additional steps that the Bureau is taking to ensure employee safety.
 - b. What is the current operational status of the two census data processing facilities in Jefferson, Indiana and in Tucson, Arizona? What steps is the Bureau taking to ensure employee safety?
 - c. We have also heard that there have been COVID-19 cases reported at call centers, or that there is a concern that they will occur, and for that reason phone response capacity is reduced. In view of the paramount importance of self-response mechanisms like the call centers, what is the Bureau doing to get call centers back up to full speed as soon as possible while also meeting public health guidance?
2. Hiring. We understand that the hiring and onboarding processes are currently paused due to the level of in-person interaction that these processes require. We also understand that the Bureau has kept job applications open in case the Bureau needs to hire additional workers in the coming months.
 - a. Can the Census Bureau share more information on where the hiring and onboarding processes stand as of today?
 - b. What percentage of jobs that the Census Bureau originally planned to create have already been filled?
 - c. What is the rate of attrition of people who were hired and trained, but have since resigned from their jobs due to health concerns in light of the COVID-19 pandemic?
 - d. What are the steps that the Bureau is taking to ensure that these pauses are not affecting the long-term response intake process?
 - e. Which additional jobs do you predict you may need to bring on as the Bureau responds to this crisis?
3. Training. We understand that the Bureau has paused in-person trainings and shifted to digital trainings. Can you provide an update on this shift to digital training?
 - a. Which jobs exactly have shifted to digital trainings?
 - b. Are all regions of the country experience equal shifts to digital trainings?
 - c. How is the Bureau accounting for communities with low broadband and internet access like New Mexico as it shifts these trainings to digital platforms?
 - d. Have all hires been notified and updated of these changes as of today?
4. Operations in Hard-to-Count Communities: What resources or efforts can the Bureau shift to places where self-response rates are the lowest and where the Bureau planned to seek out the most in-person contact (Update/Enumerate and Update/Leave census tracts), to best ensure consistency of effort to get out the count?
 - a. Can the Bureau ensure that new hires are deployed in hard-to-count communities? If so, how?

- b. What metrics is the Bureau using to identify tracts and communities where response rates are falling the farthest behind projections and where intensified efforts are and will be most urgently needed?
 - c. Can the Bureau share any updates on the Mobile Questionnaire Assistance centers? We know these were specifically planned to assist communities with a history of low response rates.
 - i. Who is the Bureau consulting with to reach a final decision on mobile questionnaire assistance centers?
 - ii. If these centers are suspended indefinitely, how will the Bureau deploy the funding appropriated by Congress specifically for these centers? Will the Bureau commit to consulting Members of Congress before reaching a final decision with regards to Mobile Questionnaire Assistance Centers?
 - d. Further, we understand that Puerto Rico was supposed to be a 100-percent Update Leave Operation because of previous natural disasters and a lack of clarity about which addresses were still occupied. Please share with our caucus how far along in the Update Leave Operation the Census Bureau got before pausing due to COVID-19 precautions? Please share all pertinent data on how COVID-19 is affecting the response rate in Puerto Rico, if at all, and what the Census Bureau's plans are to address this?
5. Community Partners. How is the Census Bureau effectively coordinating with its community partners across the country and in our congressional districts to ensure aligned messaging and outreach efforts?
- a. Is the Census Bureau holding regular updates for its community partners?
6. Communications Plan. We understand that the Bureau is in the middle of shifting its communications plan to align with new messaging that is mindful of COVID-19. Can the Bureau provide an update on when we can expect this new communications plan?
- a. What percentage of the Bureau's messaging plan will be in Spanish? And in which media markets? Will previous allocations change in response to the national emergency?
 - b. Which trusted Spanish media outlets and networks is the Bureau working with to ensure that Hispanic and Latino communities receive this message?
 - c. How is or isn't the Bureau incorporating stay-at-home orders across different states into its decision-making for its new communications plan?
 - d. How is the Bureau making sure that individuals in historically hard to count communities that may be under a stay-at-home order and have low access to broadband are being communicated to on how to complete the 2020 Census?
 - e. Will the Bureau work with local and state elected officials to obtain special permission, as needed, to conduct any enumeration efforts that are consistent with social distancing guidelines, but may go beyond the bounds of allowed activities under stay-at-home orders?
7. Census Timeline. Can you confirm whether the Bureau still anticipates delivering a count to the Office of the President by December 31, 2020?
- a. Can you confirm where the Bureau stands on extending the census data tabulation period?
 - b. If the Bureau believes in keeping the current time frame for the data tabulation period, can the Bureau please share any experientially based projections of how data accuracy degrades in relation to time elapsed since Census Day on April 1, 2020.
8. Census Bureau Funding. Is the Bureau still adequately funded to deliver on its constitutional mandate given the challenges presented by COVID-19? We urge the Bureau to provide our offices with continuous updates on the amount of contingency funds spent or projected to be spent so we can adjust Fiscal Year 2021 appropriations in accordance.

- a. To date, has the Bureau started using its contingency funds? If so, where are these contingency funds being allocated? What portion, if any, has gone directly to equipment to ensure the health and safety of Census Bureau employees?
- b. As we continue to amplify the ability to self-respond, can or has the Bureau used contingency funding to set up a system that would allow operators to take calls over the internet from any remote locations in light of health concerns?

As the Census Bureau continues to evaluate next steps, we urge you to work with us and other Members of Congress to reach a well-informed and widely accepted decisions, specifically with regards to timeline changes and adjustments. We look forward to continuing working together to ensure an accurate and complete count of our communities in the 2020 Census.

We appreciate your time to review these questions and look forward to receiving your responses by April 10, 2020.

Updated talking points attached, with more on post processing, options to open early as different states reopen under the president's guidance for phased reopening, and a new section on natural disasters.

I reattached the big index of talking points for the pending letters, fixing the typos Al noticed.

Agreed. Especially the last paragraph on page 1 titled "Why does post processing take so long?", which asserts quite well that we can't just turn around and produce counts on November 1.

Rep. Ro Khanna (D-CA-17) US House	16-Apr-20 Facebook Post	IMPORTANT REMINDER: Fill out the questionnaire you received in the mail from the Census Bureau, either on paper, over the phone, or online, and get counted. The results of the Census ensure fair representation by reapportioning the seats in the U.S. House of Representatives and the electoral college for the next decade. The Census also helps decide the distribution of federal spending throughout the country--that is taxpayer money for public schools, hospitals, and other important community services from which we all benefit. Federal law protects your responses and prohibits the government from sharing your information with anyone, including immigration and law enforcement agencies. The law also prohibits your responses from being used to deny or determine your eligibility for government benefits. For questions, visit Census.gov or call my office at 408-436-2720. Get counted!

Rep. Jamie Raskin (D-MD-8) US House	19-Mar-20 Tweet	RT @CarrollCoMD: Many of use are social distancing and self quarantined. Take this time to fill out your Census 2020. Do it online at https://t.co/fap0jzlunc https://t.co/rSQSJlpV2V Check your mail, CA-17. You should have received a questionnaire from the Census Bureau, with directions to respond to the 2020 Census either on paper, over the phone, or online, and get counted. The results of the Census ensure fair representation by reapportioning the seats in the U.S. House of Representatives and the electoral college for the next decade. The Census also helps decide the distribution of federal spending throughout the country--that is taxpayer money for public schools, hospitals, and other important community services from which we all benefit. Federal law protects your responses and prohibits the government from sharing your information with anyone, including immigration and law enforcement agencies. The law also prohibits your responses from being used to deny or determine your eligibility for government benefits. For questions, visit Census.gov or call my office at 408-436-2720. Get counted!
